Twentieth Sunday: Withstanding the Challenge

As you are all aware, the new school year has begun. There will be new opportunities for our young people to grow and through them for our families will continue to grow. There will be new challenges for the children and their folks, new hurdles to overcome from understanding a difficult subject matter to learning to get along with others. Although the school year begins with enthusiasm, it is going to take a lot of hard work for our young people to finish the school year successfully.

And so it is with every aspect of our lives. Enjoying success, conquering a goal, result from accepting the challenge, and sacrificing time and energy. It demands accepting temporary setbacks while remaining true to our course. The young couples whom I marry, looking so picture perfect that they belong on the cover of a bridal magazine, have to meet the challenges of sacrifice and commitment if they really want to have happy marriages. The happily married couples in our parish all know that marriage has brought them out of themselves as individuals, turned them away from their own natural selfishness and taught them to give and thus to truly love. Marriage is a personal challenge which they embrace and which leads them to real love.

Looking at the readings for this Sunday it has occurred to me how grounded in reality our faith is. Our faith is not afraid to speak about both happiness and sadness. It is not afraid to speak about both virtue and vice. It tells us that if we attempt to love God without loving others, we are living a sham life, a make believe faith. Faith encourages us to base all relationships on respect, particularly within marriages. Faith tells us to understand the meaning of the word sacrifice and to realize that all that is worthwhile from learning demands sacrifice. With all our liturgical splendor, with our deep understanding of the mysteries of our faith, Catholicism is fundamentally grounded in reality.

So today we come upon Jeremiah the prophet, having a bad day, a real bad day. Jeremiah had been called to be a prophet from his mother's womb. Scripture presents many different types of prophets. Jeremiah was a royal prophet. He was the prophet at the King's court. He should have been held with the deepest respect. But he refused to butter up the king by just telling the king what he and the people wanted to hear. Because Jeremiah stood for the truth, he was berated and mocked. In today's reading he was thrown into a cistern where he would have died if the King had not stood up against his own counselors and saved Jeremiah's life. Jeremiah's life should have been wonderful, beautiful, full of honor. But being true to the Word of God resulted in his being treated with contempt.

The persecution which Jeremiah experienced was something that afflicted all the prophets due to their determination to stand up for God's word, to stand for what was right and good and true, no matter what others would say about them or do to them.

Grounded in reality, our faith tells us that it is also difficult for us to stand for what is right and true. It is difficult to stand for the Lord because we will be persecuted and mocked. Yet we have to meet the challenges of life, and we have to overcome all the barriers to the truth that society and we ourselves put in our way.

This is what Jesus did. He stood for the truth and was put to death. But he was not going to compromise the Word of the Father. If this meant denouncing the leaders of the Temple, he would do so. If this meant criticizing his closest followers, he would do so. If this meant journeying to Jerusalem where he knew he would die, he would do so. The people who first heard the Gospel of Luke proclaimed had to recognize that the strife and division they experienced from all who persecuted the Early Church had its root in their determination to stand up for the truth, to stand for what was right and good.

It is in this context that we can understand the difficult gospel for this Sunday and the grim things predicted. The strife and the sword that the Lord's presence in the world will instill results from Christians accepting and embracing the challenges of Christian life.

Consider the young people of our parish who will be in middle school and high school this year. Those who refuse to go along with the drinking and drugs, those who refuse to let others take advantage of them physically, will all be given some sort of nasty label. Life would be much easier for them to go along with the crowd. But being rooted in the Lord demands that they be a minority.

Consider the parents of our parish. They will be criticized this school year for setting moral standards within their homes. Their own children will tell them that they need to get real and allow them to go along with what everyone else's parents allow them to do, basically, contemporary immorality. Many of the parents of our parish will have to put up a terrible struggle to stand for what is right and true in their own homes, with their own children. But living for the Lord is worth the struggle.

Consider our senior citizens. Their challenge to follow Christ means trusting in him as their bodies and the bodies of their loved ones begin to fail. For so many of our seniors their challenge means being a care giver when they are exhausted. Every day presents a new challenge for seniors to embrace faith and trust and hope in the Lord and live in the Light of Christ when, physically, life might be getting a bit darker. But this is the challenge that draws them nearer to God. Actually, by meeting the challenge of faith and hope they are bringing God nearer to our world.

Every day I hear of a new challenge that confronts a parishioner or a family. This family has to deal with emotional problems. That family with physical problems. This family has financial problems. That family has marital problems. All of these challenges of life, all of the daily crises we all face, all lead us to God if we embrace them with selflessness with faith, with trust in God, and with love.

Folks, hang in there. Trust in God. You do not struggle alone.

The readings for today are clear and grounded in reality. Life is full of challenges and struggles. And the greatest of these challenges are rooted in our standing for what is right and true, standing for God. But each challenge met, each crisis overcome, forms each us into more loving people.

The Letter to the Hebrews for this Sunday concludes with: "Do not grow despondent and abandon the struggle." To this I must add the last words of Jesus in the Gospel of Matthew: "And know that I am with you always."

(Vatican Radio) The witness of God's merciful love which the Church, as mother, is called to give was at the center of Pope Francis' Wednesday general audience address. The catechesis 10 Aug audience, which was held this week in the Vatican's Paul VI hall, is the latest in a series of addresses connected to the Jubilee Year of Mercy.

Dear Brothers and Sisters: In our continuing catechesis for this Holy Year of Mercy, we now consider the miracle of Jesus' raising of the son of the widow of Nain. Jesus, moved by compassion for the grief of a mother, directly confronts the reality of death and restores life to her young son. This encounter before the town gates can inspire our own encounter with the Lord's life-giving mercy as we pass through the Holy Door on our Jubilee pilgrimage. We approach that Door bringing with us our entire past, its joys and sorrows, trusting that Jesus will grant us a new beginning and revive our hope in his promises. The new life given to the son of the widow of Nain reminds us that we too have been raised from the dead and given new life in Christ through the grace of baptism. The Church has become our mother and we are called to be witnesses of God's merciful love before the world. During this Jubilee Year, may we turn once more to Jesus, for he is the Door leading to salvation and new life. May the divine mercy which we have received pass from our hearts to our hands, and find expression in our practice of the corporal and spiritual works of mercy.
